Clackamas Fire District #1

“Your Friend For Life”

Clackamas Fire District #1 is proud to be an internationally accredited organization which provides fire, rescue, and emergency medical services to five cities (including Milwaukie, Oregon City, Happy Valley, Johnson City and a portion of Damascus), as well as the unincorporated areas of Oak Lodge, Clackamas, Westwood, Carver, Redland, Beavercreek, Carus, Clarkes, and South End/Central Point. Clackamas Fire District #1 has 17 fire stations strategically located throughout Clackamas County with a workforce of more than 200 employees & volunteers and is the second largest fire protection district in Oregon, serving over 179,000 citizens in an area covering nearly 200 square miles. Our firefighters/paramedics respond to over 16,500 incidents annually throughout the fire district. Clackamas Fire District #1 is an Internationally Accredited agency meeting the highest standards in emergency service delivery. As we grow, we continue to focus on the qualities that have made our district a leader in fire and emergency service delivery:

- Commitment to Quality
- Premier Training Program
- Specialty Rescue (confined space, rope and water rescue)
- Fire Prevention Service (including community education programs)
- Humanitarian Assistance through the Clackamas Emergency Services Foundation
- Outstanding Customer Service

CCC Explores Bond Measure

For more information, email bondinformation@clackamas.edu or visit www.clackamas.edu/bondinformation

The CCC Board of Education is developing a bond proposal to update facilities and build space for educational programs and job training that lead to high-demand careers and transfer degrees. The board is expected to finalize the measure and vote to send it to the Nov. 4, 2014, ballot at the July 30 board meeting.

Clackamas Community College has scheduled six public bond forums in May to share information about the potential $90-million bond measure and seek input on the final proposal.

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

Welcome to the ninth-annual 2014-2015 North Clackamas County Answer Guide. The county is continuing to see many changes, and we are seeing new growth in residential construction, manufacturing and business opportunities.

We have continued to work to keep the communities we serve informed about the upswing in the economy in the county.

This year, as every year, the Answer Guide includes important phone numbers, addresses and websites in the county, along with new features and updates on what's new in each of our neighborhoods. That is our goal, and we hope you find this resource guide a useful collection of information about our diverse and vibrant communities.

I was thinking back to the first publication, when the county's theme was Live, Work and Play in Clackamas County. I believe that today, more than ever, this theme rings true for many of our residents, and it is one of the main reasons why I love living here.

Clackamas County has so much to offer: some of the finest outdoor recreation in the state, unique shopping areas, established restaurants, award-winning school districts and much more.

I personally invite our readers to send us suggestions for next year's Answer Guide. Our staff continues to update existing information and add new sources, and we are always open to new ideas for the coming year.

Once again, as I always say, if we have done our job, we believe you will still be using this resource guide when the next year's issue publishes.

Clackamas County is as diverse as the state of Oregon as a whole.

With thousands of farms, dozens of which are certified organic, Clackamas County also has more nurseries and more Christmas tree farms than any other county in Oregon. Clackamas County's natural beauty borders Portland to the north, and its western areas largely feature urban amenities.

In between is the Highway 212 industrial district, the growing communities along Interstate 205, Clackamas Town Center and Oregon's original capital, Oregon City. Despite the recent economic downturn, the county continues to grow, adding more than 12,000 residents over the past three years.

Tourism opportunities abound, with the rugged and beautiful Mt. Hood National Forest and a number of state and county parks offering plentiful hiking, biking, skiing and camping opportunities throughout the area.

Clackamas County was one of four original districts created by a Provisional Legislature in 1843. At that time it covered portions of four present-day states and one Canadian province. In 1844 the Columbia River was made the northern boundary of the county, and the United States-Great Britain Boundary Treaty of 1846 relocated the northern border of both the United States and Clackamas County at latitude 49 degrees. In 1854, Clackamas County acquired the boundaries it has today.

Long before the arrival of the settlers, the land now known as Clackamas County — named after the Clackamas Indians — was an important crossroads for Native Americans. They came to hunt, fish and gather at Oregon City's Willamette Falls.

"Information acquired from the U.S. Census, Portland State Population Research Center and the Oregon State Archives.

County Commission

Chairman John Ludlow

Ludlow previously served as mayor of Wilsonville, on the Wilsonville City Council and as a board member for Clackamas Community College. He has twice been honored as Wilsonville Citizen of the Year and received the Oregon Department of Corrections 2012 Outstanding Volunteer Award.

Jim Bernard

Bernard was elected in November 2008. He previously served as mayor of Milwaukie for eight years and is the owner of a third-generation, family-owned business founded in 1925 — Bernard's Garage. Currently a Wilsonville resident, Bernard was born and raised in Milwaukie, and was instrumental in starting the city's farmers market.

Paul Savas

Savas is serving his first term on the board, winning election in 2010. Savas owns an automotive tuning and repair shop that he opened on McLoughlin Boulevard 25 years ago. He has also served on the Oak Lodge Sanitary District Board, the Oak Lodge Water District Board and other boards. He lives in Oak Grove with his wife and two children. He is the only commissioner who lives in the North Clackamas urban areas.

Martha Schrader

Schrader previously served as a county commissioner from 2003 to 2009 and she also served as a state senator from 2009 to 2011. She holds a bachelor's degree from Cornell University, a master's degree from the University of Illinois, and has completed advanced coursework in public policy and administration at Portland State University.

Tootie Smith

Smith was a state representative from 2001 to 2005 where she served on several key committees including Ways and Means. A fourth-generation farmer, a former journalist and lobbyist, she has served as a chief financial officer for several corporations. She served on the board of directors for the Main Injury Association of Oregon for seven years and was its president for two years.

Clackamas County What's new:

Is the Clackamas County Board of Commissioners on the brink of another major political shakeup?

Chairman John Ludlow and Commissioner Tootie Smith, who just unseated a couple of board members in November 2012, now believe Jim Bernard and Paul Savas are two other commissioners who should be replaced. In endorsing these incumbent's challengers, Ludlow spent most of an 80-word letter criticizing Savas and Bernard.

The shakeup began at the onset of 2011, when former Chairwoman Lynn Peterson announced she would leave to serve as a policy advisor to Gov. John Kitzhaber. Charlotte Lehan was appointed to replace Peterson, and commissioners filled Lehan's vacancy with Jamie Brown, but Smith and Ludlow unseated them on a platform of battling Portland creep."

Countywide votes against the new light-rail line resulted in a successful lawsuit by TriMet to prevent any delay of the project to connect Milwaukie and Oak Grove with Portland. In addition, the county and the Oregon Department of Transportation are constructing the Bridge project to create a new, limited access highway between I-205 and the Rock Creek Junction along Highways 212224. They hope the connection will ease congestion and help with freight traffic.

DAMASCUS

The city of Damascus is in northeastern Clackamas County, distinguished by dramatic forested buttes, rolling hills and valleys crossed with streams, all under the watchful eye of majestic Mount Hood and less than 15 miles from downtown Portland.

A half dozen families had established the early beginnings of the Damascus community by 1852 as they laid claims along the Bluff-Foster Trail, a spur off the old Bluff Road, which connected Eagle Creek and Portland — a historic settlers route that would later become Sunnyside Road.

The name Damascus as an identifier for the community can be traced back to 1807 when a post office by that name was established.

Despite the proximity to metropolitan Portland, and although local residents had long enjoyed amenities (like water service to their homes) not common in other unincorporated rural areas, Damascus remained perched on the very edge of urban development until the dawning of the 21st century.

The city of Damascus boundaries are roughly the Multnomah County line to the north and Southeast 257th Avenue to the east. The southern boundary is as far south as the Clackamas River in some places, and to the west the boundary is SE 177th Avenue.

Voters in 2004 also chose members of the first Damascus City Council, many of whom had been involved with the citizen group advocating the formation of the new city. Presently, they are working with the Damascus community, Clackamas County and the state to preserve the spirit of Damascus for future generations.

Damascus City Council

Mayor Steve Spinnett

Spinnett was born in Japan along with five of his nine siblings. When he was 4 years old, his family moved to Portland. He has lived in Damascus since 1970 and graduated from Gresham High School. He opened an auto repair shop in Southeast Portland in 1970 that is still in operation today.

Jim DeYoung

A native of North Illinois, DeYoung was born into a farming family on the state line with Wisconsin and came to the Damascus area in 1970 with his wife. A teacher of Greek and New Testament at Western Seminary, he was an early participant in the Damascus Community Association.

Andrew Jackman

Jackman moved with his family from Corvallis to Damascus in 1970. He said the city has a wonderful opportunity to design its own infrastructure, character and process for future development."

Mike O'Brien

Born in Oakland, Calif., in 1907, O'Brien has been a Damascus resident since 2004. He resigned his City Council position April 7 and his replacement had not been announced as of press time.

Randy Shannon

Shannon is married with two children and has served on numerous groups and committees to pursue incorporation of Damascus since 2002.

Dan Tomlinson

Tomlinson was born in Topeka, Kansas, moved with his family to Clackamas in 1970, and they have lived in Damascus since 1976. He has 42 years experience as radiology technologist, and for 10 years he's owned a small farm in the Academia area.

Bill Wehr

Wehr was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and in 1970 came to Damascus, where he and his wife have lived ever since. He said he wants to help bring before the citizens a quality Comprehensive Plan that respects property rights."

What's new

Although a majority of residents who cast ballots in November 2013 voted to disincorporate, a "double-majority" of all 6,879 registered voters was required but not reached, so the measure failed. Sanctions from the state against Damascus for not filing a comprehensive growth plan include the recent passage of House Bill 4029 which gives some Damascus residents the right to withdraw, or de-annex, from Damascus and join with another nearby municipality.

Previous attempts to have an approved plan have failed, and now three comprehensive plans will be on the May ballot. One of the plans, the original plan developed by staff and the Damascus Planning Commission, will be on the ballot because of a petition signature campaign. A second plan, said to favor private property, was prepared under the guidance of Mayor Steve Spinnett. The third plan, sponsored by City Council President Andrew Jackman, is said to have an environmental bent that protects the city's rural character.

GLADSTONE

“Home of the Pow Wow Tree”

Gladstone has something for everyone at the junction of the Clackamas River and the Willamette River: parks, boat launch, sports fields and a senior center.

Mayor Wade Byers, the mayor of Gladstone who's planning to file for a record eighth re-election campaign, has lived in the community most of his life.

His favorite thing about Gladstone? “The people who choose to live there,” he said.

He added, “It is different for everybody, but some people are attracted to Gladstone by the community atmosphere, by the schools — which are a very positive facet of the community — and by the proximity to Portland.”

Byers laughed when he said, “Some people don't know why they like it — they just do.”

As for the school system, Byers noted that there is just one middle school and one small high school, so “the kids all go through school together and the parents go through the schools together as well. It is a special and unique opportunity.”

The Gladstone area was among the first in Oregon to see white settlers, who lived alongside the area's Indians, who operated a ferry across the Clackamas River. The famous “Pow-Wow” maple tree marked the place where the different Indian tribes, mainly Clackamas and Multnomahs, met to make trading agreements, settle community affairs and conduct wedding ceremonies. The tree still stands on Clackamas Boulevard, though a little battered.

What's new:

After the Trolley Trail, a 6 mile paved path to link existing bike lanes, came to fruition between Gladstone and Milwaukie, Union Pacific removed an old Clackamas River trolley bridge that had been eyed for pedestrians. Now city leaders will explore other options for linking Oregon City to a continuous 20-mile network connecting Portland, Milwaukie, Gladstone and Gresham.

Gladstone city councilors had hoped to build a new library to consolidate the current Gladstone Library and the Oak Grove Library into one new facility. But after voters rejected a plan that would have authorized the library's urban-renewal funding, leaders considering other proposals to consolidate the libraries or renovate both structures.

OAK GROVE

Over a century of history.

For the inside word on the history of Oak Grove, talk to longtime resident Dick Jones.

Jones described the boundaries of Oak Grove this way: "To the west, is the Willamette River, north is the city of Milwaukie, south is the Oregon City School District boundary and east is Kellogg Creek."

To distinguish between Oak Grove and Oak Lodge, Jones noted that to him, Oak Grove is where the old town of Oak Grove is situated. "It's a little sliver along Oak Grove Boulevard; from Oatfield Road to the river," he added.

Oak Lodge, Jones said, is a bigger area, a "more all-encompassing area."

His parents moved to Oak Grove when he was only 4 years old, because they wanted to "get out of the big city," he said.

His parents could "move around via the railroad" that ran through downtown Oak Grove.

"Its quite different now," Jones noted, in that people use the rail system to get to populated areas.

"In those days people used the railroad to get out to less dense areas — it's an interesting twist," he said.

Jones noted that he "rode the streetcar until its last day," in 1958, and said he remembers when the only grocery store was the Piggly-Wiggly, on Courtney and McLoughlin.

Jones left Oak Grove for a period of time after college, but in 1994, he moved back into the same house where he grew up.

Oak Grove is special to him, because it is "one of those low-density areas where people know people. You can still walk on the streets safely," he noted.

Jones is particularly fond of the Trolley Trail, which passes by right outside his house. Clackamas County completed an extension of the trail last year.

JOHNSON CITY

Established in 1970

One of the smallest cities in the metropolitan area with just over 630 people — though not the smallest in the state — Johnson City may be easy for Clackamas residents to overlook, but it's beloved by the people who live there.

Johnson City, near Gladstone, was incorporated by a 49-to-10 vote on June 16, 1970. At the time of the election, it had the distinction of being owned entirely by one man, Delbert Johnson. Johnson started the development as a trailer court in 1959 and tried without success to have the 45-acre area annexed to Gladstone in 1968. The 1969 Oregon legislature established a boundary review board to prevent a proliferation of small incorporated cities, but the proponents had filed for an election before the effective date of the law.

Last May, residents of Johnson City voted to become part of the Clackamas River Water District, where the citizens had gotten their water for many years. City councilors encouraged approval of the measure to ensure continued water supply from CRW, and to allow citizens to vote in CRW elections.

What's new

Happy Valley Mayor Lori DeRemer, who is in her fourth year as mayor, plans to seek another term. With a newly reached agreement over an eventual border between Milwaukie and Happy Valley, DeRemer also said Happy Valley will continue to welcome annexation requests. Happy Valley's goal is to annex to the Clackamas River, and Milwaukie will be "aggressively annexing" as well, although Milwaukie's potential reach is much more landlocked by other cities than Happy Valley's. Areas in Damascus bordering Happy Valley may soon be able to switch allegiances thanks to a recent vote by the Oregon Legislature. Dual jurisdictions between Clackamas County and Happy Valley are also a challenge in successfully developing the proposed Eagle Landing project.

Last fall, Metro favored Happy Valley's bike-lane and sidewalk project on Southeast 120th Avenue with a $2 million grant to provide safe connectivity for pedestrians and bicyclists between Mountain Gate Road and Scott Creek Lane. Happy Valley also received $300 for its Rock Creek Employment Center Infrastructure Funding Plan to encourage "development ready" sites in what's identified as a Regionally Significant Industrial/Employment Area with approximately 200 buildable acres.

Signature event:

Happy Valley is proud of its year-round community events. Summer in the city opens with the 4th of July Festival and a quarter-mile parade of bikes, floats and classic cars, with more festival fun in Happy Valley Park featuring live music, food vendors, rides, bounce houses and the Splash Pad. The day ends with a fireworks extravaganza at dusk. In July and August, the park is alive with the sound of music and the Summer Concert series on Thursday nights. City-wide National Night Out, the Harvest Fest and the annual Tree Lighting round out the city's seasonal celebrations. This year, Happy Valley is the host city for the 2014 NW Natural Street of Dreams featuring magnificent dream homes with vista views in the heart of the community.

"The Dogwood City of the West"

Nestled along the eastern bank of the Willamette River, Milwaukie enjoys a unique location. It borders the state's largest city, but also provides easy access into the recreational opportunities of Clackamas County. There is easy access to the river, trails and highways. Milwaukie owns a rich history. It was first a pioneer village founded in 1888 and formally incorporated as a city in 1933. It has come to be known as the Dogwood City of the West, as it was once home to the largest Dogwood tree and is the birthplace of the Bing cherry. Milwaukie is a small town compared to Portland, its northern neighbor, but it's got some big businesses. Bob's Red Mill, which now sells its whole grain goods around the world, is headquartered in the city. There's also the renowned Dark Horse Comics, which is based downtown. Providence Milwaukie Hospital, on 2nd Avenue, is one of the city's biggest employers.

What's new:

Milwaukie voters face a major decision on the May ballot on whether to accept an extra $6 tax on the average property to pay off TriMet for the city's debt for light rail set to open in September 2015.

If voters don't pass the $10 million bond measure, Milwaukie would have to cut an estimated two or three staff members next year. City Manager Bill Monahan proposed a budget April 24, and additional meetings are scheduled for additional review and discussion of the budget on May 29 and June 5 at 6 p.m. at City Hall.

City councilors believe it's important that citizens be able to choose the level of services to be provided within the community. Milwaukie's 18 budgeted employees this past year almost put it below West Linn's employee number. In the past three years, 44 employees have left or were fired from Milwaukie, and the city has decided not to refill many of these positions.

Currently the city pays a 5 percent interest rate to TriMet, but the rates have been hovering above 4 percent based on the city's credit rate. Milwaukie Finance Director Casey Camors warned City Council that the rates could go up when and if the city issues bonds in a few months.

Councilors also referred a measure to voters to change the city charter for the city manager's residency requirement. Managers haven't lived in the city for decades, and Milwaukie elected officials have used their power designated by the charter to excuse Bill Monahan from moving within six months of his hire. The measure would make clear that Milwaukie's top administrator would never be required to live within city limits.

Signature events:

Milwaukie City Council

Mayor Jeremy Ferguson
 Ferguson took office in January 2009 and has been a member of the city's budget committee since 2006. He serves on the board of directors for the American Red Cross and applies his passion for emergency preparedness to create healthy and resilient neighborhoods.

Council President David Hedges
 Hedges was born and raised in London. He served for over 10 years as a police officer there, retiring as a detective. His wife's family has lived in Milwaukie since the 1980s, and Hedges moved here in 2006.

Councilor Scott Churchill
 Churchill was born and raised in the Pacific Northwest and has lived in Milwaukie for the past seven years. He had served as a Milwaukie Planning Commissioner for more than six and a half years before being elected to Council in November 2012.

Councilor Mark Gamba
 Gamba, born and raised in Colorado and living in Oregon for over 18 years, has worked all over the world as a photographer with many assignments from National Geographic. His intention is to help make Milwaukie more livable now and in the future.

OREGON CITY

End of the Oregon Trail

There's a good reason Oregon City hosts the annual First City Celebration. Founded in 1829 and incorporated in 1841, Oregon City is a city of impressive firsts.

It's the first incorporated city west of the Rocky Mountains. It's the site of the first municipal elections, newspaper and Protestant church. But the city owes its existence not to any of those manmade firsts, but to something that was here long before the first settlers arrived: Willamette Falls.

The city of Oregon City is based on the location of the falls," said local historian Patrick Harris. Willamette Falls makes it a very good place to develop industry."

According to Harris, in 1829 Dr. John McLoughlin built a sawmill there — but the falls had already been important to Native Americans as a place for fishing, hunting and celebration for thousands of years. "Many of the observers noted it was a place of great potential development," Harris said.

McLoughlin later settled in the little city at the falls, earning him the title of father of Oregon City," as well as being the father of Oregon itself.

Oregon City, by the late 19th century, was also a famous "last" — last stop on the Oregon Trail.

The small city boomed; the first steamboats on the Willamette River arrived on the scene, and shipbuilding thrived in Oregon City itself and just upriver in Canemah, now a neighborhood of the city. In 1889, the Willamette Falls Electric Company transmitted the first electric power sent long-distance over power lines, from the falls to Portland.

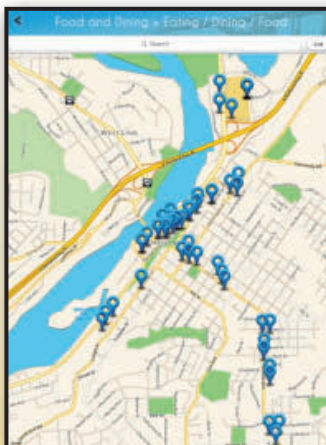

The falls were the site of paper mills on both sides of the river — and Blue Heron Paper Company was a major employer in Oregon City, at the south end of Main Street, until its closure in 2011 expanded the redevelopment potential of the city.

The town's unique geography — split between a series of terraces rising from the river — contributes to another prominent local feature: Oregon City boasts a municipally-owned elevator, unique in the hemisphere. The elevator rises up the bluff and provides a view of the falls, mill, historic downtown and two bridges spanning the Willamette.

OCBiz - Oregon City Business App

OCBiz! Oregon City is premiering the new "OCBiz" App for your iPad, iPhone or Android device. Location and contact information for every business in Oregon City is now just a tap away. Whether you are searching for professional service providers, great places to shop or a tasty dining experience, OCBiz has it all in one simple and convenient application.

It's yet another tool that is sure to enhance our already thriving business community. It provides greater access to Oregon City business information such as address, phone number and map locations for any business possessing an active city business license.

At a later date, businesses will have the ability to add information, such as a company logo and store hours to make Oregon City businesses even more memorable and accessible. The application also provides bonus information about city facilities and parks, along with news happenings at City Hall.

It can be downloaded through the iTunes App Store or Google Play or by searching for OCBiz. For additional information please contact Eric Underwood at 503-496-1552 or eunderwood@orccity.org.

Oregon City - City Commission

Mayor Doug Neeley

Doug Neeley was elected mayor after serving in two different stints on the City Commission. A statistical consultant, Neeley earned his Ph.D. at North Carolina State University.

Commissioner Betty Mumm

Mumm graduated from Oregon City High School and is coordinator of health education for Providence Willamette Falls Medical Center. She was elected in 2010.

Commissioner Carol Pauli

Pauli is co-owner of KC's Midway Historic Public House. Elected in 2012, she was initially appointed to the commission due to her extensive experience in various city groups, including the Metro Enhancement Committee.

Commissioner Kathy Roth

Roth is a safety analyst for Legacy Health System who has been closely involved with Oregon City School District over the years. She graduated from Lewis & Clark and was elected in 2010.

Commissioner Rocky Smith

Smith is a lifelong Oregon City resident who is an art teacher at Oregon City High School. He earned his B.F.A. from Pacific Northwest College of Art and master's from George Fox.

What's new:

One big question facing Oregon City for 2014: Who will be its mayor starting in 2015?

Mayor Doug Neeley has to take at least two years off from public office due to term limits. He has several big initiatives he hopes to wrap up before his term expires at the end 2014. These include a new police station, a renovated/expanded library and development in the downtown urban-renewal area.

Neeley began remarks at this year's State of the City Address with a moment of silence for fallen OCPD Reserve Officer Rob Libke, who was shot by a suicidal arsonist in November. A round of applause followed for Libke's wife, who just gave birth to their daughter in February.

A ballot measure will appear on the May ballot to authorize Oregon City to sell the bonds to expand and renovate its Carnegie Library, built to serve 5,000 people and now serving a population of 54,000.

Although voters prevented the water-rate rollback last year, the public-works department has identified facility needs that will threaten the quality of drinking water if voters don't allow more than 3 percent per-year rate increases. City commissioners also have made it a goal to address more than $1 million in deferred maintenance for parks. By 2022, Oregon City is required to build a seismically sound police station and is working with the school district on a proposed location.

Efforts are underway to increase the city's population, tax base and number of opportunities for economic development. An approximately $10 million Clackamette Cove project is expected soon to begin construction of garden apartments after years of languishing in the declining condo market. After the recent passage of smaller annexations, Neeley is looking forward to more annexations passing to allow the development of the Beaver Creek plan.

Signature events:

Pioneer Family Festival - Events include the Teddy Bear Parade, skate and BMX competitions, music and entertainment, vendors, art and more. Event dates: May 2-4, Location: Clackamette Park. Online: pioneerfamilyfestival.com.

First City Celebration - This event celebrates downtown with art, wine tasting, beer tasting, vendors and a daylong celebration. It also celebrates the many firsts associated with Oregon City. When: Saturday, July 26 downtown from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

221 Molalla Ave., Suite 102
Oregon City
503-210-6000

The Soil and Water Conservation District works in cooperation with willing landowners and the local community to keep our county healthy and pristine. Through workshops, habitat enhancement partnerships, classes and one-on-one technical assistance, SWCD helps Clackamas County residents manage natural resources, improve the environment and realize the greatest benefit from their land, be it an urban backyard or Willamette Valley farmland. In the organization's efforts to improve water quality, it works with nursery and produce growers, livestock owners, foresters, hobby farmers and neighborhood homeowners to balance the county's environmental and economic demands to benefit the entire community.

Clackamas County Urban Green

ccurbangreen.org
Clackamas County Urban Green grew out of a sense of urgency about what was happening to the environment around the county. The group witnessed a surge of development within the Urban Growth Boundary, and realized that, if no action was taken soon, many of the natural features of our neighborhoods would be lost from ill-conceived, dense in-fill development. Interested people can show their support for CCUG by going to the website and clicking the "Show Your Support" link. Visitors to that page can send an automated email indicating support. SOLVE is a nonprofit organization that brings together government agencies, businesses and individual volunteers in programs and projects to enhance the livability of Oregon. Gov. Tom McCall and other community leaders established the organization in 1969, when they saw the need for community action to address growing problems in the ever-growing state. Sites in Clackamas County include Goat Island and Phillips Creek.

Living the Dream in

The host city and site of the 2014 NW Natural Street of Dreams

Coming summer of 2014.
For tickets and more information visit
StreetofDreamsPDX.com

People dream about living the perfect life. We all do. Go on, close your eyes and dream a little, right now. It starts with you and your family settled in your dream home, in a picture-perfect small town community. The view out your windows is beautiful—green hills rising around you and blue skies are above. You feel safe, secure and content.

Neighbors will wave and call you by name. Later, the kids will grab their bikes and the soccer ball. You'll leash up the dog and everyone will head off to the nearby park and trails for family fun and exercise.

You can almost see your days unfold. For you, it's just a quick hop to the heart of town and all the day's destinations: some shopping, the bank, the library, the dentist or the gym, and most definitely a stop for coffee along the way! Maybe tonight's the night for an impromptu dinner

Clackamas County Social Services

clackamas.us/socialservices
2051 Kaen Road, Oregon City 97045; 503-655-8640

The Social Services Division seeks to provide quality services and meaningful opportunities for elderly, disabled and low-income residents of Clackamas County. Social Services engages in planning and coordination between organizations and advocates to guarantee rights and ensure access to services for all.

The Children's Center of Clackamas County

childrenscenter.cc
1713 Penn Lane, Oregon City 97045; 503-655-7725

The Children's Center is a partner in Clackamas County's response to child abuse and the answer to a child's pain. A private, non-profit medical assessment center, the Children's Center supports children and families in cases of suspected physical abuse, sexual abuse, neglect, drug endangerment and witness to violence.

Clackamas County Volunteer Connection

clackamas.us/socialservices/volunteer
Local volunteers play an important role in providing social services to Clackamas County residents. Since 1986, the Volunteer Connection has been a vital link between volunteer placement and volunteer engagement in Clackamas County. On an annual basis, Volunteer Connection connects hundreds of individuals to volunteer service by working in partnership with over 200 community organizations. Volunteer opportunities are available at local Senior Centers, Food Pantries, youth and family oriented programs, homelessness reduction programs, and many other critical community support programs.

Clackamas Women's Services

256 Warner Milne Road, Oregon City 97045; 503-655-8600
Each year the CWS Domestic Violence Shelter provides safe emergency housing, clothing, food, safety planning, advocacy, children's services and counseling for approximately 150 women and children. Occasionally we also provide emergency, short-term housing through hotel vouchers for specific kinds of situations. The 24/7 Crisis & Support Line is available to survivors and families/friends of survivors who need support or have questions about their situation. Call our Crisis Line for availability: 503-654-2288 or 888-654-2288. The support-line staff and volunteer advocates offer immediate, 24 hour access to safety planning information, peer counseling, information and referral services, domestic violence information, and information on shelter availability. Confidentiality is protected in all conversations, and we offer interpretation in over 300 languages through Language Line interpreters.

How to find the right car seat

1. Find a car seat that fits your child. As children grow, how they sit in your car will change. Make sure the car seat you purchase is designed to fit your child's current size and age.
2. Make sure that the car seat is the right fit for your vehicle. Not all car seats fit in all vehicles. Test the car seat you plan to buy to make sure it fits well in your vehicle.
3. Buy a car seat that can be installed and used correctly every time.

FIDO—Friends Involved in Dog Outreach

fido-clackamas.org

2100 Kaen Road, Oregon City 97045;
971-678-6928

The Mission of Friends Involved in Dog Outreach, FIDO, is to improve the lives of animals, to help keep them out of the shelters and to support those in the shelter. FIDO's Dog Food Bank and AniMeals programs, help to keep dogs in homes with their families and out of the shelters. Vaccination clinics help to assure dogs are licensed, and the Microchips Clinics make sure lost dogs are returned home. Through the Sampson fund, FIDO helps dogs that come into the county shelter, injured and in need of medical assistance. FIDO has grown and expanded since its conception in 2004, when its sole purpose was to provide support to Clackamas County Dog Services. Since its founding in 2004, FIDO, a non-profit 501(c) 3 organization, has rapidly gained awareness and respect in the community. It continues to grow, providing new services and filling the needs of the community.

SCHOOLS

North Clackamas School District

As Oregon's fifth largest school district, North Clackamas Schools serves nearly 18,000 students in Milwaukie, Happy Valley, and Johnson City, as well as Oak Grove, Clackamas, and Carver.

North Clackamas Schools feature effective and innovative approaches to education that work to meet the unique needs of each student.

Rigorous graduation requirements and a spectrum of education choices help students outpace the state average for math, writing and reading.

Here, education extends well beyond the "three Rs" to embrace music, the arts, career-technical programs, physical education, world languages, service learning, science, history and leadership.

Diversity is a strength of North Clackamas Schools. Students have a variety of learning styles, challenges and gifts, economic backgrounds, languages, faiths and cultures that help them learn from each other. Teachers work to find the best strategies to help each child succeed, and the district provides programs and schools to meet a range of needs, including numerous college level courses.

North Clackamas Schools has the largest volunteer program in Clackamas County, with more than 9,000 people serving as mentors, tutors, SMART readers and classroom helpers. Beyond that, schools partner with businesses, community leaders and churches, working to build success for students and a strong community.
